

Plants and Animals

Plants: The main plants here are Coniferous trees like spruce, fir, and hemlock trees. They have a cone shape and are denoted by the name “Evergreens” since they do not lose their leaves in the winter. This is a good thing because most of the time it is winter in Taiga forests.

Animals: Migrating bird species often make stops in Taiga forests, but the mainstays of these ecosystems are usually moose, brown bears, Siberian tigers, lynxes, foxes, squirrels, wolves, and many forms of insect life that prey on Coniferous trees.

PRECIPITATION AND TEMPERATURE

Precipitation: Average rainfall in Taiga forests range from 30 to 70 centimeters per year, but this can change if there is a drought.

Temperature: The temperatures in the average Taiga Forest range from meat freezer cold to boiling lava hot, with almost nothing in between. The winters are long and cold, while the summers are short and hot. The range for some forests can be anywhere from -70 degrees Celsius in winter to over 30 degrees Celsius in the summer. So pack warm... or cold... or whatever.

Human Impact:

Due to the fact that almost nobody wants to live there, coniferous forests have gone relatively unmolested by development. However, they are being logged at extremely high rates.
